The crowd that formed a solid mass about the scene of the fire was peculiar in many ways. It has been said before that New York crowds differ from those that congregate in any other quarter of the globe. This one was cosmopolitan, and to walk through it as from one end of the second ranks to the other was to run the gamut of human varieties.

not seem to realize that they were so near to where had been death and destruction a scant twenty-four hours before. They had the appearance and the air of sight-seers wending their way through a country fair. The very ringing of the conductor's bell heightened the general effect of idleness and freedom from care. The entire park, surrounded as it was with the army of houses of New York's earlier aristocracy, seemed to have been created from the pages of a Thackeray or a Dickens.

ided upon for more than one reason. It had been demonstrated that it was too difficult to ascertain whether or not the thousands of foreigners, who speak broken English or not at all, had any relatives among the dead girls, and again it had been decided to put all unidentified bodies in the morgue chapel at midnight.

There were some bodies possibly twenty-five that never can be identified, they said. They are buried absolutely before human recognition. No one was allowed to view them yesterday. They were huddled together in a far-off corner, the lids on their boxes.

Moving Coffins in the Rain. By midnight thirty-three identified bodies, including those of two victims who died at the New York Hospital, and fifty-three unknown ones, were taken to the regular morgue. The work was done under the supervision of William C. York, superintendent of the municipal lodging houses, by men who had sought shelter there for the night.

NEVER LOCKED THE DOORS

Harris Says They Were Kept Closed on One Side, However.

Isaac Harris, of Harris & Blank, proprietors of the Triangle Waist Company, in a statement last night said that "All of the doors leading to the three lefts in our establishment open inward. It is true that we have a foreman stationed at the four doors on each left-two of which lead to the elevators and two to the stairways. These foremen are there to examine packages that may be carried out by employees, but the doors are never locked. It is an absolute lie that the doors were locked."

STATE LEAVES ALL TO CITY

Labor Commissioner's Inspection Found One Fire Escape.

Albany, March 26.—The State Department of Labor has no jurisdiction over fire escapes on factory buildings in New York City, although its inspectors regularly make factory conditions there. John Williams, State Commissioner of Labor, said tonight that the Asch Building was inspected by one of the state's inspectors on February 27. He reported a fire escape on the building. The department ordered the owner to provide lights in the halls and stairways during working hours.

Money and Jewels Found.

Everything was as systematic as could be. The work of searching the bodies for money and jewels was done under the supervision of Central Office detectives, headed by Lieutenant Sullivan.

THE NURSES KEPT BUSY.

A nurse walking near one of the big open pier doors saw a man standing there, his lips moving and his eyes streaming with tears. He looked longingly into the river. She motioned to a policeman, who led the man away to the pier hospital. All during the day tired and careworn policemen received and cared for.

THE IDENTIFIED DEAD.

Just before midnight last night the grimaces of the dead as a result of the fire agreed upon 112 as the number. Eighty-seven had been identified, and of the other bodies their names seemed slight hope of the recognition of twenty-five. In one case a skull is all that is left. Apparently it is that of a woman. RECOGNIZES HER DEAD LOVER.

Rebe Solomon, of No. 81 Christie street, identified the body of her lover, Joseph Wilson, by means of a ring and a watch she had given to him. Wilson was to have called on her on Saturday night to discuss plans for their wedding in June, and when he did not come she tried to telephone to him. She heard that the building was on fire and rushed to it, and stood in the street until the bodies were carried to the morgue. She went there with her mother at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, but it was 1 1/2 hours later before the line had moved sufficiently for her to get inside the building. She passed by the bodies, keeping her eyes on the hands and then stopped when she saw the ring on the dead man's finger.

Womer's Spring Hats and Bonnets for Automobile Wear

We are showing some very smart hats and bonnets for automobile wear. They are small to medium in size, distinctly chic in appearance, and a decided improvement on any automobile hats we have shown in a long time. To this brief category of merit we may also add that they are reasonable in price.

Women's Automobile Hats, in plain or fancy straws, with soft rolling brims, as well as in Demoiselle cloth and pongee silks. Also, effective striped or plaid straws, trimmed with bows, quilts or fancy rosettes. Made to cover the hair, with soft crowns. 5.00, 6.50, 7.50, 8.00

Women's Automobile Bonnets, made of pongee silk, raffia straw and messaline silks. These bonnets are an entirely new idea, with a detachable veil of chiffon fastened with a strap to permit of its being used or not, at will. Trimmed with colored silks to match. 4.50, 5.00 and 6.50

STUDENTS SAVED 50 GIRLS Put Ladders Across Acreway and Helped Fugitives Over. Frank N. Sommer, a member of the Public Utilities Commission of New Jersey, also a professor at the New York University Law School, said yesterday that the students in his class had rescued about fifty girls from the fire. Speaking of the work of rescue he said:

"I was lecturing to a class of about fifty boys, when suddenly we heard the whistles and gongs of fire engines. I then open the door of the lecture room and I threw the door of the law school faculty room, which opens on an acreway separating our building from the one in which the blaze started. "Some of the boys followed me, and we saw that the ten story building across the acreway was on fire. The open space between us and that building was filled with ascending smoke. There were car-polemen shrieks, and girls appeared at the windows of the shirt factory. "We hurried to the roof of our building, where two ladders had been left by painters, and the boys showed the ladders across the acreway to windows on the opposite side. The ladders worked like levers, apparently never giving a thought to the possibility that their own building might catch fire from the flames that were leaping out into the open space. "How it was done I don't know, but in a surprisingly short time about fifty girls were brought across to safety. The boys paid no attention to the thick smoke and risked life and limb to steady the terror-stricken girls on the ladders. Some of the rescued were pitiable sights. In some cases it was necessary to heat out the flames that had caught their clothing, and many of them had blackened faces and singed hair and eyebrows."
